THREW ROTTEN EGGS.

Mr. Carlisle Had Difficulty in Making
His Covington Speech.

Covington, Ky., Oct. 22.—Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle made the first of his speeches in this State to-night at Odd Fellows Hall, which was crowded to its utmost capacity. Mr. Carlisle was received with most generous and hearty applause when he appeared on the stage. This was followed by vociferous cheers for Bryan from a crowd of about 100 men forming a line in the standing room at the rear of the hall. This continued for some time after Secretary Carlisle began to speak, completely drowning his voice, so that those nearest him could only hear his words. At the same time a crowd occupied the street and they rent the air with shouts for Bryan. This continued at frequent intervals during the entire speaking. Now and then a man on the outside would shout: "Carlisle, the traitor!"

After Mr. Carlisle began his speech, he stopped and begged the turbulent crowd to leave the hall. The disturbers did not leave, but they interrupted him afterwards less frequently. The mayor and several police were in the hall, but there was no perceptible effort made to stop the disturbance.

While Secretary Carlisle was interrupted continuously during his speech and eggs were thrown about the hall, four being thrown upon the stage, the most disorderly scene was at the close of the meeting when hoodlums gathered about the exit with insulting remarks. There was many noisy people on the street and in such spirit as to threaten violence as well as insult to the Secretary. The authorities had not taken radical action to prevent the disturbance up to this time, but after the meeting the mayor and chief of police promptly furnished a detachment of twenty police who safely and quietly escorted Secretary Carlisle to the residence of Mr. Frank Helm.

Secretary Carlisle was disturbed and showed his annoyance over the yelling at the opening of the meeting but he did not know that any eggs had been thrown until after the meeting was over, although one of the eggs struck the centre chandelier. He was intensely in earnest in his argument and held his audience. He was unconscious of the howling elements outside of the hall and was himself surprised at the calling of a detachment of police to escort him to Mr. Helm's residence.

He will speak at Bowling Green Saturday night and at other points in Kentucky next week, when it is feared he will encounter disturbances.

Mr. Carlisle in opening said: "I have come here to speak in behalf of Democratic candidates pledged to the principles of a Democratic platform and my purpose is to discuss some of the pending political questions from a purely Democratic standpoint. We are not Republicans or Populists or fusionists; we are simply plain, old-fashioned Democrats without any of the modern adulterations in our doctrines or any of the Populist or communistic appendages to our organization. We have reached a period of great discontent and great danger. Party lines have been to a great extent obliterated; party organizations have been partially disrupted and the counsels of old and experienced party leaders disregarded. The issues involved are of such tremendous importance to the country that for the time being ordinary party obligations sink into utter insignificance and every patriotic citizen is imperatively called upon to obey the honest dictates of his own conscience without regard to the approval or disapproval of caucuses and conventions; and that is what many thousands of our people are now doing. Strange and alarming doctrines have been launched under the name of Democracy and party loyalty has been appealed to for the purpose of coercing or persuading the people to cast their votes contrary to their honest judgments."

"What are the principles of this American Democracy, for I do not refer to that wild, turbulent and destructive form of Democracy which has been imported from abroad, and which is so nearly allied to anarchy that it is almost impossible to distinguish one from the other. Liberty regulated and protected by law, local self-government and strict construction of the powers delegated by the States and people to their agents, no interference with the private business of the citizen except so far as may be necessary for the preservation of the peace, the public health, the enforcement of honest contracts and the maintenance of the just authority of the State and federal Governments, no prescriptions on account of religious beliefs, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, habeas corpus, the subordination of the military to the civil authority, no taxation beyond the necessities of the Government, honestly and economically administered, the nearest possible approach to the absolute freedom of commercial intercourse at home and abroad and sound money for the use of the people, in order that their trade may be profitable and that they may not be cheated out of their earnings by the use of spurious or depreciated coins or irredeemable paper; these are some of the familiar and important articles in the creed of the old Democracy which during the last hundred years was illustrated and consecrated by the genius of Thomas Jefferson, the heroism of Andrew Jackson and the courage, fidelity and patriotism of Grover Cleveland. This is the Democracy I believe in and my support will be given to the candidates who represent it in this contest."

Mr. Carlisle referred to the term "bolters" applied to the gold Democrats and said: "Gentlemen, we are not out of the Democratic party and we do not intend to go out or be put out."

SHE THANKED HIM.

But it Was So Profusely He Will Not Risk Such Gratitude Again.

In a Powell street car the other day a well-known clerk in a San Francisco bank gave up his seat to an elderly lady, who said:

"I am very much obliged to you sir—you are extremely kind."

"Don't mention it," said he.

"But," said she, "it was really very good of you, and I thank you very much."

"It is nothing, my dear madam," he replied.

"But," said the lady, "do not attempt to put aside my thanks. Your act is so unusual, young sir, that it is my duty to acknowledge a courtesy so sincere."

"But," said the clerk, somewhat annoyed, "it is nothing. Never mind, madam."

"But I do mind," said the lady. "We are living in a time when people who could show the lesser courtesies of life frequently fail to do so."

"But," said the helpless man.

"Do not interrupt me," said the lady. "Age nowadays is little habituated to receive from young people the courtesies to which it is entitled. Besides, the marked courtesy which you have shown me in giving up your seat so promptly shows at once that you must have been brought up with the utmost care."

The embarrassed bank clerk by this time was scarlet.

"Yes," said the old lady continuing, "and your mother should feel proud of you. Ah, a mother's love and the benefits of a higher education are easily apparent. I do not wish to reciprocate your courtesy by fulsome acknowledgment, but it is sufficient merely to look at you to know that you are a gentleman by birth and breeding. I appeal to anybody on the car."

The passengers giggled in chorus while the unfortunate bank clerk fled.—San Francisco Argonaut.

WHAT THE BEE DID.

Following, clipped out of the middle of an editorial in the Sacramento (Cal.) Bee, replying to the Fresno Republican, is too good to be lost:

"Primarily, the Bee has not gone over to the Democratic party."

"Secondly, the Bee has not abandoned the doctrine of protection to bask in the sophistries of free trade."

"Thirdly, the Bee has not indorsed the 'federal interference' plank of the Chicago platform—although, if it had, it would have the distinguished precedent of Abraham Lincoln to appeal to, for he unhesitatingly endorsed a far stronger declaration against such interference in the Republican platform of 1860."

"The Bee has not gone over to the Democratic party, for it is now battling for the soundest of sound Republican principles: a principle which the Republican party itself enthusiastically endorsed: a principle unanimously approved by a Republican legislature of California: a principle to which the California delegation to St. Louis was pledged—the free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1. The Bee has not abandoned protection, for it is battling for protection when it is battling for the cause without whose success there will, in not many years, be few American industries to protect. It is not warring on the side of free trade, for Bryan stands on a platform pledging him to a tariff for revenue, which is a tariff for protection. This line has been so clearly defined that Palmer and Buckner have both denounced the Chicago platform because it 'makes for protection.'"

A HEALTHFUL TEMPERATURE.

As the season has arrived for the overhauling of the heating apparatus, let each living room be supplied with a thermometer as a necessary adjunct. A temperature of about seventy degrees should be maintained as most conducive to health and economy. An enervated system, susceptible to colds and other disorders are superinduced by overheated apartments. A person who dwells constantly in a temperature of eighty degrees cannot expect to enjoy either comfort or health under such unhygienic conditions.—Health Magazine.

MAGAZINE VERSE.

These lines pass current as magazine poetry:

"My heart, just one kiss, just one,
That thro' eternity's gloom
I may see the light of your eyes
Reflected 'gainst the dark of the tomb."

The more magazine poetry we read the more we like newspaper poets.—Iowa State Register.

A Mean Blotter is Awful!

Recently we received an envelope, addressed in a disguised handwriting, enclosing one of our Monthly Blotters, enameled one side, with an inscription thereon suggesting that the Blotter's absorbing qualities were not what they should be. There was no signature, nor anything to indicate the sender's name, so we have no sure means of replacing the defective Blotter with a good one. But if the sender will be kind enough to send his address or call at our establishment, we will gladly give him a bunch of the very choicest Blotters we have. Sometimes an imperfect sheet escapes our closest inspection, and we really appreciate the good offices of a friend in calling our attention to it.

DOG WHO KNOWS A THING OR TWO

A physician who resides in a neighboring town has a dog which he claims can beat the canine world for ability, intelligence and all-round usefulness. The animal is a massive black fellow, and has never been known to enter a gate to reach a place if he can attain his ends by jumping a fence. He acts as mail carrier for the doctor, and when he gets a letter from the postman, whom he meets on the pavement, he will clear the high iron railing in front of the house, and make for the front door knob, which long practice has enabled him to turn by a dexterous turn of his paw. He will never deliver a letter to any one but the physician, who thinks so much of him that he believes that the dog might be taught to compound pills.—Elmira Advertiser.

A USEFUL ASSOCIATION.

"What is this Young Turkey party I see so much about in the papers?" asked the new member.

"I don't know exactly," the Cheerful Idiot hastened to say, "but I think it is some sort of boarders' protective association."

SHE CHANGED IT.

But The New Subject Was as Objectionable to Him as the Old One.

He threw down his newspaper to the floor and waved both hands over his head, while his clinched teeth refused to give exit to the remarks that were struggling to come out.

"What's the matter, Orlando?" his wife exclaimed, although with less agitation than the situation seemed to warrant, for she was used to his ways.

"Every time I am reminded of it," he muttered in a voice which shook, "I am filled with indignation."

"Every time you think of what, Orlando?"

"Of the way Europe gets our money. Our heiresses marry noblemen. European actors and singers come over here and ship money home in barrels. They take it so fast that they are unable to count it. The outflow of wealth from this country is something awful."

"Well, Orlando, I suppose that is pretty bad, but did you know that you hadn't had that leaky faucet in the kitchen attended to yet?"

"That is not the topic under consideration," he exclaimed savagely.

"Not exactly. But you know, dear, that you aren't going to have half as much trouble with the outflow of money as you will with the overflow of water from that faucet if they find out about it and make you pay a fine for wasting water."—Detroit Free Press.

SYMPATHETIC PHOTOGRAPHY.

Sympathetic photography is among the novelties of the day. It is a somewhat alarming discovery, as one's likes and dislikes may be recorded by a snap shot taken of two hands while a short distance apart; the position of the sparks indicates affinity or repulsion.
